LABOR TROUBLES
AT STEAM PLANT
SETTLED TODAYNon-Union Boiler Workers Quit and Union
Men Resumed Work

The labor difficulties at the west end steam plant came to a conclusion at noon today and when the 1 o'clock whistle sounded practically all of the men resumed their positions and work was going along smoothly. From the Bates-Rogers Construction company's office this afternoon, a statement was given out to the effect that the non-union boiler installation crew had been removed, thus satisfying the other organized trades, brick masons and carpenters, who resumed their posts when this arrangement was made known.

At a late hour, it was stated that all of the laborers had resumed their duties and an effort to organize this branch of the workers, was dismissed, at least temporarily.

The strike and general walkout of all trades began yesterday when imported laborers, said to be non-union, arrived to install a boiler system in the new plant, was even more marked today than yesterday. Mass meetings were reported last night, and again this morning and "walking delegates" and representatives of labor organizations were said to be conferring with the striking workmen.

Laborers Held Meeting.
A mass meeting of the laborers employed on the job was held in the Rickard hall last evening and according to reports, several talks were heard, all favoring the organization of this branch of workmen at once. It was hinted earlier today that a representative of Labor would be sent to Dixon with a charter to perfect such an organization. It was also reported that an officer of the state federation had been active in this city several days, checking up on the various labor organizations and trades represented in the construction of the big addition to the steam plant.

Boiler Makers Idle.
The men who arrived yesterday to install the system of boilers left their duties at noon yesterday and did not return. Conferences held yesterday failed to formulate a working plan whereby operation could be resumed.

NO EVIDENCE OF CRIMES AGAINST
JUDGE ENGLISHTwenty-eight Charges of Misdemeanor Filed Against Jurist

Washington, Mar. 16.—(AP)—Twenty-eight counts on misdemeanor charges against Federal Judge G. W. English of the Eastern Illinois District, were submitted to the house judiciary committee today by a sub-committee which recommended impeachment proceedings against the jurist.

The committee considered the report at an executive session with several members expressing the belief that the counts might be reduced by half in the committee's report to the house. That report is expected to be made this week with the house giving immediate attention to it.

Judge English was accused of "high crimes and misdemeanors" by the special house committee which investigated the case last summer, but the judiciary sub-committee decided there was insufficient evidence to offer charges of crime.

The investigation was instituted when Judge English was charged with unwarranted and arbitrary use of his office, particularly with reference to bankruptcy cases and with "other irregularities."

Live Quail Placed

G. B. Shaw, Editor of the Telegraph today received the shipment of two large crates full of live quail, sent to him by Wm. Stratton, chief game warden for the state of Illinois, and Mr. Shaw has turned the quail over to Lowell Park. Mr. Graybill, caretaker at the park, will care for the birds until milder weather and they will be turned loose on the grounds in the hope that they will nest and raise young in the neighborhood.

Hunters are warned that Lowell Park is a game preserve, as is also Hazelwood, adjoining the park, and any person caught killing or molesting game on the park grounds will be subject to arrest and fine, regardless of closed or open game season.

TARIFF QUESTION POINT OF CONTENTION IN PLANS FOR FARM RELIEF LEGISLATIONHouse Committee Will Amend Bills Submitted for Debate

Washington, Mar. 16.—(AP)—The question of the tariff stood out today as one of the fighting points which may confront the house agriculture committee in its efforts to agree upon a measure to settle the surplus crop problem.

A draft of proposed legislation prepared by a middle western farm relief delegation, which has been sitting with the committee, contains no direct mention of the tariff, although Chairman Haugen announced two weeks ago that a plan before the committee was "not worth the paper it was written on" because of such an omission.

The chairman advised the delegation to write into the bill provisions empowering the president to raise without limit, the tariff on any agricultural commodity. He also suggested that the price which the government would undertake to provide for surpluses be fixed at the world price of a commodity plus the tariff and other costs of importing it.

Clause Was Left Out.
This latter clause was put into the first draft which the delegation framed, but when the bill was completed yesterday, it was left out.

As it now stands, the federal farm board to be created would fix "a just and reasonable price."

The only provision relating to importations is one for an embargo on corn which the bill would put into effect for a year after its enactment.

Chairman Haugen predicted today that the committee would adopt a number of amendments if it decided to report out the bill.

In its present form the measure would authorize appropriation of $250,000,000 to start a revolving fund to care for farm surplus. This sum would be paid back by equalization fees collected on farm commodities and handled by the federal board.

Hear Bloomington Man.
Before taking up the bill, the committee today heard Matthew B. Wells, a farmer and banker of Bloomington, Illinois, who opposed all plans for government control of surplus and levying of fees. He urged formation of a $400,000,000 agricultural corporation with 101 directors representing every state and suggested authorization of a loan of $200,000,000 to get the corporation started.

"Keep the government out of business," he advised. "Let the farmer handle this problem himself. We would pay back the loan within twelve months."

"Let me have this credit and I'll promise to have corn selling at $1 a bushel in Chicago by July."

Rock Island, Ill., Mar. 16.—(AP)—Miss Ruth Wilson, 18, who was injured a week ago when an automobile in which she was a passenger collided with a telephone pole, died last night. She had not been conscious at any time since the accident. Clarence R. Germain, 20, was fatally hurt in the same accident.

The committee considered the report at an executive session with several members expressing the belief that the counts might be reduced by half in the committee's report to the house. That report is expected to be made this week with the house giving immediate attention to it.

World is Not Growing Better,
M. E. Men Decide

The meeting of the Mens Club of the Methodist Episcopal church, held at the church Monday evening, was an unusually happy and interesting one. During the supper music was furnished by the "Cotton Picking" Trio, piano and mandolins. Dr. Raymond Worsley presiding at the piano and Niles Palmer and Edward A. Snapp playing the mandolins. Henry Hey, amused his hearers with a clever stunt, after which came the feature of the evening, the debate on the question: "Resolved, that the World is Growing Better." Prof. A. H. Lancaster of the Dixon schools and H. V. Hunt, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., defended the affirmative side of the question; while Dr. C. E. Smith and Carl Buchner argued the negative, the decision being left to a vote of the members of the club. The vote was 20 to 18 in favor of the negative. Four guests from Amboy attended the meeting.

The chairman advised the delegation to write into the bill provisions empowering the president to raise without limit, the tariff on any agricultural commodity. He also suggested that the price which the government would undertake to provide for surpluses be fixed at the world price of a commodity plus the tariff and other costs of importing it.

Pana, Ill., Mar. 16.—(AP)—William Kinsey Parker, 17 year old son of Charles Parker of Shelbyville, was accidentally shot and killed at 11 o'clock Monday night by Miss Deedee Condo, 15 year old daughter of A. B. Condo, in the Condo home.

Parker had brought to the home an old fashioned four barreled Deeringer revolver. It was lying on a table and the two were scuffling over a ring that Parker had.

Miss Condo picked up the gun and Parker told her to let it alone. She says she did not realize that it was a gun because of its appearance. She pulled the trigger and the bullet went through Parker's heart. He died in 30 minutes.

Physicians attending him say it will be almost a miracle if he survives.

Aspinwall, who is a son of Capt. Homer F. Aspinwall, former wealthy resident of Stephenson county and for several terms a member of the state senate from the twelfth district, had driven from his farm to Pearl City on business and was leaving the village for his farm home when in passing over a grade crossing his truck was hit by a freight train from which cars were being switched to a sidetrack. His truck was flung 20 feet from the track and demolished. Out of the wreckage rescuers a few moments later took Aspinwall unconscious and with blood pouring down over his face from the fearful scalp lacerations. A Pearl City surgeon gave him emergency attention and he was then brought to Freeport.

Tientsin, Mar. 16.—(AP)—The Russian ship Oleg, with a barge and a cargo of munitions was seized today at Taku by warships of Marshal Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian warlord. The warships have been blockading the port for several days to prevent supplies reaching the Kuomintang, national peoples army, supporting the Peking government.

BULLETIN
London, Mar. 16.—(AP)—The British representative at Peking has been instructed to take no action for raising the Tientsin blockade except in co-operation with the other treaty powers and to use force only as a last resort to safeguard the security of foreigners in the areas affected by the Chinese conflict. Premier Baldwin told the House of Commons today.

BULLETIN
Peking, March 16.—(AP)—The United States and other powers today delivered an ultimatum to Chinese factions demanding that blockade of the port of Tientsin be ended and all impediments to harbor and river traffic be removed by noon Thursday. The ultimatum signed by signatories of the protocol of 1901 was handed to the commanders of the forts at Taku and Chinese vessels outside of Tientsin. The United States, Great Britain, Japan and Italy have a dozen or more naval craft in these waters. The protocol of 1901 made stipulation concerning the disarmament of forts at the mouth of the Pei river on which Tientsin is located. The blockade has been preventing access to Peking from sea and recently resulted in Chinese troops firing upon two Japanese destroyers.

The action of the powers was made known to the Chinese foreign office in the following memorandum forwarded by the Dean of the diplomatic corps:

"In order to maintain the general treaty right to international commerce and particularly the right to free access from the capital to the sea, provided in the protocol of 1901, the powers demand:

1—Hostilities in the channel from the Taku bar to Tientsin must be discontinued; 2—The mines and other obstructions must be removed; 3—Navigation signals must be restored and not further molested; 4—Combatant vessels must remain outside the bar and refrain from interference with foreign ships; 5—Searches of foreign vessels, except by customs authorities, must be discontinued.

If satisfactory assurances on these points are not received by Thursday noon March 18, the naval authorities of the foreign powers will proceed to take such measures as they find necessary for the purpose of removing and suppressing obstructions of free and safe navigation of the channel."

Plymouth, Vt., Mar. 16.—(AP)—The condition of Col. John C. Coolidge was little changed today. An early morning report from the sick room said the father of the President had passed a restful night and was able to take a little nourishment.

Dr. Albert M. Cram of Bridgewater, physician in charge, planned to visit his patient during the forenoon. In the meantime Deputy Sheriff Mac Aulay, the Colonel's bodyguard, was authorized to issue the brief statement.

While news from the Coolidge home continued to be favorable a large force of men started out from Woodstock early today to open the snow-bound road, leading from Plymouth to White River Junction, to automobile traffic.

A stretch of 19 miles is already passable for cars and work was concentrated on the seven mile strip from Bridgewater to this hamlet. Three tractors and the snow plows were used in the work.

New York, March 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Sarah McKessy, of West New Castle, Ireland, mother of 21 children, today informed a group of her offsprings to immigration officials as future citizens of the United States.

She arrived on the liner Aurania on her way to join her husband and four more of their children, who live in the Bronx where McKessy is a tailor. She left two married children in Ireland. Five of her brood are dead.

Mrs. McKessy said that while she enjoyed her children and would not surrender one of them "until they're ready to fly on their own wings," she believed if she had to live her life over again she would not have so many.

"But I find that they take care of each other," she said, "and that's a help. If I keep abreast of the little ones the older do very well by themselves."

Stewards said there never was a better behaved family.

BULLETIN
Plymouth, Vt., Mar. 16.—(AP)—Col. John C. Coolidge whose condition had shown some improvement during the past two days, lost strength slightly today. This was the substance of a bulletin issued about 12:30 o'clock today by his physician, Dr. A. M. Cram of Bridgewater.

When the widow of Levi Leiter died she left personal estate of $1,000,000. This estate, it is said, is not in the suit brought by the Countess of Suffolk. According to the terms of the Leiter will, the estate, given to the son and the daughters, cannot be divided until Joseph Leiter and his sisters are dead.

Interest also has been manifested in the proposed appearance on the stand of Joseph Leiter to tell about an alleged loss of $9,000,000 in wheat transactions. His father is said to have given him $9,000,000 to pay his debts and the Curzon claim that "Dad" Leiter charged "Joe" with only $2,000,000. This is for the purpose of upholding the Curzon contention that the $750,000 given to Mary Leiter's titled husband and the $1,000,000 paid on the death of Levi Leiter should not be charged against their share of the estate.

POEM WRITTEN BY DIXON LADY

The following pretty poem was written by Mrs. J. E. Reagan of this city:

LOVE.
The sun's hot rays have gone to rest,
Each little bird has sought its nest,
The moon sheds forth a clear pale light,
The cricket chirps, sound in the night.
Two lovers wander down the lane,
Their hearts atone, to love refrain.
The story old, yet new each time,
When whispered low, "Say you'll be mine."

He hears the soft sweet answer,
"Yes."
Then some one's folded to his breast,
The zephyr's seem to breathe a prayer,
For those two happy lovers there.

A prayer, that this sweet love may last,
Even when the honey-moon is past,
Last through the years, as they grow old,
When silver threads, shine 'mong the gold.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—
Oranges, cereal, thin cream, fish hash, corn bread, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—
Spinach and cheese souffle, toasted corn bread, rhubarb tapioca, milk, tea.

Dinner—
Stuffed pork tenderloin, fried apple rings, onions baked in husks, radishes, whole wheat bread, steamed fig pudding, milk, coffee.

Bulk is added to the breakfast menu by serving whole oranges rather than just juice. While children under four years of age should never be given more than the juice of an orange, older children and adults need the "roughage" found in the pulp of the fruit.

As rhubarb comes into market keep in mind the necessity of serving it often.

Rhubarb Tapioca.
One cup quick-cooking tapioca, 2 cups water, 3 cups rhubarb cut in inch lengths, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups sugar, ¼ teaspoon soda.

Cook tapioca in water with salt until clear. Pour boiling water to move than cover over rhubarb, add soda and let boil up once. Drain and rinse in clear cold water. Add to boiling tapioca with sugar and cook five or ten minutes. Turn into a mold and let stand several hours to chill and become firm. Serve with sweetened whipped cream or sugar and cream.

The apple rings are sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon before frying and the fruit is not pared.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By Allene Summer

A Few Choice Words!

Considerable ado about the tarrying of Vera Cathcart without our nation's gates! Perhaps rightly. But somehow I can't get nearly as much wrought up over any injustice sustained by Vera as I can over the spectacle of hundreds of thousands of shawl-headed immigrant wives and daughters of men in this country sent back to the homeland every year because "the quota is filled."

But, although our nation's laws have deliberately wrecked the family which, in theory, it recognizes as "the unit of society," no one got much excited about it until recently. They do say the new law, which will not include the quota women folks of men folks of men already in this land, will go through! Here's hoping!

Ford is going into the cloth business. He is starting a factory which will manufacture upholstery cloth for his famous vehicle. Hordes of women who can't afford a spring suit hope that Henry can get in on this sartorial problem and help a little!

The average soft coal miner in America earns $1300 yearly. The average miner's family is six. A New York lady complains that she cannot even clothe herself "decently" on a yearly alimony of $100,000.

Political.

Our nation's educators marched to the White House demanding a secretary of education in the president's cabinet. Not such an unreasonable request, it would seem! After all, we do have as many children of school age in this nation as hogs and cattle, and a cabinet officer for the express purpose of fostering livestock is not considered unreasonable at all!

The governor of the state of Ohio starts an investigation of the rumored state prohibition department's use of women as "decoys" to "get" a man. Much ado about it. Perhaps rightly so. But for the sweet sake of consistency, why not trade against the practice in all departments of justice? The police departments of all our large cities nab a large majority of their suspects by the use of the woman "decoy," as the poor persecuted "movie lizard" will testify!

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Eliminate Rats.

Blue-flowered cat-mint, planted around the house or barn, is an excellent safeguard against rats. By the time the plant is grown rats and mice will abandon the buildings. The flowers also make a charming border around the building.

Fresh Bread.

To cut fresh bread, dip the knife in boiling water before using. Slices will be cleaner cut and will not crumble.

Use Bone or Wood.

Metal forks or spoons should never be used in handling pickles. Regular implements of bone or wood are designed for this purpose. The action of the vinegar on the metals is dangerous.

Soften Flannels.

Flannels which have become hard and shrunken may be softened by soaking in gasoline. Care must be taken to keep from flame. Also, do not rub, as friction may cause an electric spark.

Couple Married At McCausland, Ia.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parker at McCausland, Ia., Wednesday evening, March 10th. Rev. Fred Shears, pastor of the M. E. church of that city, uniting in holy matrimony the lives of Miss Mary Ann Eller and Earl Leslie Gorton of Amboy. The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Spencer, also of Amboy. Mrs. Spencer is a sister of the bridegroom. The bride was gowned in a beautiful

Watch Your Breakfast

Energetic Mornings Depend on Breakfast—Start Always with Quaker Oats

HOW you feel all morning depends largely on what you eat for breakfast. Thousands have unenergetic forenoons because of wrong breakfast eating.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder; 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamins and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

To Vote Ball Park Out of Town for Sunday Game

Brookfield, Mo., March 16.—(AP)—Brookfield has a baseball team in the Illinois League. Brookfield also has a blue law which prohibits baseball playing within the city limits on the Sabbath.

It was learned today that at least 800 of Brookfield's population want to see ball games regularly this summer, so they're going to turn out en masse for the spring election and pass a measure which will automatically place the ball park and fair grounds outside the town. If these 800 succeed then the Fans' Association will have some use for the baseball team this year.

WALSH DEMANDS PROSECUTION OF WHEELER ENEMY

Wants Colleague's Foe Tried on Charge of Perjury Now

Washington, Mar. 15.—(AP)—A demand that Justice department prosecute for perjury G. B. Hayes of New York, the "surprise" witness for the government in the Montana trial of Senator Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, was made today in the senate by Senator Walsh of Montana.

As a spur to the department, he introduced a resolution directing the Attorney General to advise the senate whether it is the purpose to submit Hayes' testimony to a grand jury with a view to obtaining an indictment against him.

Declaring that the story of the prosecution of Senator Wheeler makes "a black chapter in the history of American jurisprudence," Senator Walsh said it was of "transcendent importance that the attempt through perjury testimony to silence a member of this body and overwhelm him in ignominy should not pass unnoticed."

Reviewing events at the trial in Montana last year, at which Senator Wheeler was acquitted of the charge of accepting money for prosecuting oil lease cases before the interior department, Senator Walsh said Hayes' testimony on its face was incredible.

That story was that Wheeler had conferred with him in New York and offered to split the fee with him for prosecuting the oil lease cases of Gordon Campbell of Montana.

HUMANIZING ELLIS ISLAND.

A couple of years ago this country adopted a new immigration law, stricter than any it had ever had before.

It was a law that was forced on us, so to speak. New conditions at home and abroad had made it imperative that the old policy of admitting to our shores anyone who cared to come be modified radically. So the new law was given firm restrictions.

This was proper. The flood of immigrants was growing too great. America was discovering that new people, with alien customs and alien ideals, were coming in faster than they could be assimilated.

Nothing has happened since the new immigration policy was adopted to call for an opening of the gates. The conditions that called for its passage still exist. America still has the right to pick and choose from among those who knock at its gates.

But one thing has become increasingly evident during the past months; in minor details the present immigration law is radically in need of amendment.

There is for example, the provision under which the Countess of Cathcart was temporarily excluded. The commissioner at New York—Mr. Curran—was utterly powerless, under the law, to decide her case on a commonsense basis. There is too much red tape, too many iron-bound rules.

But that, after all, is a minor matter. What is more important is the rule whereby American women who marry foreigners become, automatically, foreigners themselves.

A Kansas woman, Mrs. Peggy Hull Kinley, whose parents and grandparents were born in this country, married a British officer. She came back last fall—and instead of being allowed to enter without question, as a free-born American citizen, she was admitted under the immigration law as a British subject. Since the British quota was exhausted she could only enter for six months. Now she must leave—must leave despite the fact that she was born in this country of native-born stock.

There are countless cases like this that fail to attract public attention because the principals are not so prominent as Mrs. Kinley. All in all, a great deal of needless suffering and hardship is imposed on innocent people in this way.

A bill is pending in the Senate to iron out these difficulties. It would not relax the strict bars against wholesome immigration. It would merely make the law more humane and sensible.

USING THE POLICE CLUBS.

The story coming from Passaic, New Jersey, reflects no credit on the police of that city. Using night sticks on strikers who were making no offensive or criminal movement and were keeping the peace as much as a crowd ever does—the kind of a crowd that gathers to look at a circus parade, according to all newspaper reports—the police assaulted strikers with brutal fear. Newspaper men attempting to photograph the action of the police were assaulted, one being a young woman, cameras smashed and a motion picture machine costing $2,500 was thrown on the pavement and ruined. Each newspaper man was given a crack over the head in order to show him the police were masters of the situation. This has nothing to do with the right or wrong of the strike. The police frankly said that they stopped the cameras of the newspaper photographers because they were not going to have the evidence against them for brutality toward a peaceful crowd published. They did not succeed, for the newspapers rescued enough pictures to make the evidence final. Later action was taken against the police and indictments have been found. The strike goes on. There are more demonstrations and the police, whatever now happens, have weakened their position in hereafter maintaining order in Passaic. Riots follow as a natural consequence.

The chief grounds for a famous divorce filed recently is that they have been married since 1925.

Coal's so high. Every time we go below to fire the furnace we think we are in the depths of despair.

Keeping your feet on your desk doesn't hurt it much, except the sheriff is liable to come and get it.

There isn't one man out of a thousand who realizes that he can be one man out of a thousand.

Not that he ever needed much barbering.

Old Granddaddy Frog had hopped in to Scrub-Up Land, and now he was all finished and ready to hop out again.

Not that he ever needed much barbering! For Granddaddy has neither hair, fur nor feathers to be trimmed, and he had no beard or mustache to be barbered, or a tail to be combed and clipped.

About the only thing that Granddaddy does need is a new coat. But when he's ready to go to the Land Where Spring Is Coming, he does need that badly. I am sure if you had to hide deep down in the mud at the bottom of the pond and stay there all winter to keep from freezing, you'd need a new coat too, by spring.

But Rubadub, the fairyman of Scrub-Up Land, doesn't even have to find a new coat for him. Mind you—the old frog gentleman gets it himself. He doesn't buy it, or steal it, or find it, or borrow it, either. He grows it, right on his back!

He just peels his muddy old brown wrinkled coat right off his back and there's a new one underneath, as fresh and green as new grass—and a new white waistcoat also, right up to his chin.

But this year there had been a rusty spot on Granddaddy's new coat. He rubbed it and scraped it with his finger, and did everything he could, but it wouldn't budge.

So he had hopped into Scrub-Up Land to see if Mister Rubadub, the fairyman, could take it off with turpentine or Fairyland Special Cleaner or something.

But still it wouldn't budge, so Mister Rubadub said, "I'll just put a drop or two of green dye on it, sir, and that will fix it all hunky-dory."

So he put the green dye on it, sir, and that will fix it all hunky-dory."

And that was the end of him, for this story isn't about him at all.

Her Own Way.

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

EXPLANATIONS

"Of course," said Mamie, "Sterns will keep me here just as long as he can tonight. Julie, for he knows that you are rooming at our apartment. I bet you'll hardly get out the door when he'll come here to pump me, but don't you worry, Julie. I'm enough for that man and he knows it. I've never come off second best when he's tried to hawl me out yet."

"Say, Judy, your friend Mamie is right there," Jimmie remarked as we went out.

"You've said something," I answered. "Mamie Riley is the best friend I've had in all the world. I never dreamed a girl could be so sweet and sincere and honest. Why, Jimmie, when I see her smiling at all those satyr, who think that they are flattering her, I can only think of a fly in a muck bed. Yes, Mamie is my best friend."

"No, Judy, not your best friend, if you'll consent to count me in. No one on earth will be a better friend to you than I if you'll let me be so."

"My, but you're coming along fast, Jimmie. You know I hardly knew you in our old home town and now you want me to let you be my best friend."

Jimmie Costello looked so hurt that I hastened to assure him that I knew he was as good a friend as Mamie.

"But not any better. Remember that, young man," I said.

"Well, I'll try to be satisfied with that," he grinned. "But I'll warn you, young lady, I'll not take anything less than some time —" he tucked me a little closer under his arm — "that I may ask you to let me be a little something more."

"Don't. Please don't, Jimmie, for I'd hate to lose as good a friend as you, if you are hinting that you want to be my sweetheart. I don't want a sweetheart and I do want a friend."

"Oh, don't worry about me," cheerfully remarked Jim. "What do you want to do, take a taxi or do you want to go into the first eating place we come to?"

"That's much better. I'd rather walk."

As we passed in front of a brilliantly lighted window, Jimmie Costello stopped short and twisted me around.

"Judy, how long have you been here?"

"About two months."

"And have you had to stand the insolence of those men all that time?"

"No, I didn't have to all the time, but if I were not listening to their insolence, I would have been listening to their compliments which were worse. I've come to the conclusion that a man is inordinately proud of his supposed power to please for he's always trying to add to his little box of tricks."

THE VERY IDEA

by Hal Cochran

GRANNY

She was sittin' by the fireside, and her gaze seemed far away. It didn't quite surprise me 'cause I'd seen her oft that way. I just kinda sat and watched her, but she didn't know I knew that the thoughts that she was havin' sorta turned her feelin' blue.

Little tots, with cheery voices played around about her heels, an' the thought that quickly struck me was, I know just how she feels. Peace of mind and restful quiet, through the boisterousness were marred. I could almost understand how youthful laughter hit her hard.

Was the day when she was seen' just the brighter side of things, but when once they've traveled through it people know what old age brings. Now a mind was trailin' backwards. How an aching memory plays on a person's longings for the faded youth'ful days.

There were really shades of sorrow in her wrinkled, worn-out eyes. She could see the near tomorrow that would sever all the ties. Kinda tough to really know that there's no aid that you can lend, an' ya can't stop granny dreamin' when she's driftin' to the end.

The tightest man we know of is the fellow who wouldn't get weighed 'cause he had to tip the scales.

Bandits robbed a New York restaurant and one waiter was dern near shot for putting his hand out instead of up.

Maybe writers dwell in attics because few of them are able to live on first stories.

It's a good thing a barber doesn't illustrate his funny stories with cuts.

He was a tenor warbler and a tender-hearted duffer.

He closed his eyes when singing so He couldn't see folks suffer.

NOW, HONESTLY—

If it weren't for conductors, we wouldn't have any street cars.

And, if we didn't have any street cars, all of us would have to do a heap of walking.

That's reason enough, in itself, for being a bit considerate when passing judgment on the man who takes your fare.

Maybe he DID seem a bit grouchy this morning—which proves that he is human. Perhaps you happen to be in good spirits, and his attitude looks all wrong.

But, how about the people who paid fares ahead of you? Betcha some of them irritated him.

Friendliness makes his job sweet-er. Be fair when you pay yours.

The shortest bedtime story I know of is: "Mamma! I wanna drink of water."

If a wife declares she'd never marry again if something happened to her husband, she might feel that way because she thinks there is not another man like him—or because she's afraid there is.

DOCTOR—Why, did my coming make you so mad?

OLD LADY—I was thinking about the money I've spent on apples.

Forgives Wife for Part in Conspiracy to Give Him Poison

Sawtelle, Calif., Mar. 15—(AP)—W. H. Bowers, wealthy banker, has forgiven his wife, Mrs. Olive Orr Brugen Schmidt Bowers, for her part in an alleged plot to poison him, it was stated today.

The reconciliation came about after a conference with the Rev. John Hall, pastor of the church which Bowers attends and who was instrumental in bringing about the arrest of Elmer L. Archer and Mrs. Bowers after listening in on a party line telephone conversation.

When Mrs. Bowers was arraigned, her elderly husband appeared and posted $50,000 bond and declared their marital relations were at an end. Archer is clerk in the Bowers bank and still is in jail. His wife declares she believes him guiltless and will stand by him.

Judge Warren H. Orr, Mrs. Bowers' brother, who came here from Carthage, Ill., to defend his sister, said that so far as the Bowers are concerned, the incident is closed.

"I do not know what will be done in the courts in this unfortunate matter," he added, "but I hope the case can be settled and dropped."

Military Training for Students Is Assailed

Washington, Mar. 15.—(AP)—Two letters assailing military training in colleges and high schools, one from R. B. Fosdick, chairman of training camp activities during the war, the other from President A. E. Morgan of Antioch College, Ohio, were made public today by John N. Sayre, chairman of the newly organized committee on militarism in education. The reserve officers training corps was referred to by Mr. Fosdick as a "vicious institution" and "a recrudescence of militarism" that is "sheer madness." Dr. Morgan said he believed military training in schools and colleges has as its chief result, not increased efficiency in the technique of warfare but rather a change in the mental outlook of our young people so they look upon war as a normal part of life and expect to take part in it.

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Bible reading and meditation prepared for Commission of Evangelism of Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Read Jn. 14:7-12. Text: 14:9. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.

Meditation—How can we be sure of God? When the spirit of man sinks in weariness and is at its lowest ebb he fears "The great companion is dead." All perplexities center here, for all man's thinking social as well as personal is colored by his thought of the eternal. With the insight of a great spiritual experience these humble followers of Jesus wanted to be sure of God as the basis of lasting satisfaction. "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us." When you really know me you will discover that you know God, said their Master. Vital and adequate to live by this answer to the central quest of the race. Such consciousness of God transforms life. "If a man could feel."

Not one day in the poet's ecstasy. But every day, feast, fast, and working day. The spiritual significance burn through the hieroglyphics of material show. Thenceforward he would paint "the world with wings."

Prayer—Oh Thou Infinite and Eternal God in Thee and in Thee alone we live and move and have our being. Teach us to see Thee as Thou art. We would look unto Jesus the Author and perfecter of that faith in Thee which makes us children of the Living God over whom death can have no power. Amen.

MOST ACCIDENTS RESULT OF RECK- LESSNESS, REPORT

Committee Submits Report of Probe to Sec.

Hoover

Pedestrians are involved in two-thirds of all traffic accidents resulting in personal injury or death, according to the Committee on Causes of Accidents, whose report to the Second National Conference on Street and Highway Safety has just been submitted to Secretary Hoover. Fatal collisions of automobiles with pedestrians seem to be increasing more rapidly than the total number of fatal automobile accidents. This according to the Committee indicates that drivers are making progress in learning what to expect from other drivers and how to keep out of collisions, but that no such improvement has been made in meeting the dangers when drivers and pedestrians confront each other. The Committee says whether the education and regulation of pedestrians as well as of drivers should not be given greater attention than at present.

Incompetence as a cause of automobile fatalities could be greatly reduced by development of more thorough and rigid examinations for drivers' licenses. "Incompetence to operate an automobile safely may consist of ignorance of regulations and customs; insufficient strength, quickness or skill in controlling a motor vehicle; serious defect of sight or hearing; defective intelligence; temperamental or emotional inability to do the right thing in a sudden emergency."

"For the detection of some of these forms of incompetence we already have adequate means, but for others there are no examination methods simple and reliable enough to be of wide practical application. Methods could be devised which would be highly dependable and at the same time not difficult to administer. A really adequate and practicable procedure for examining applicants would be a powerful means to guard the public interest, and would amply justify the research necessary for its development."

In the meantime the Committee makes no recommendations as to the best forms of examination, except that they should include a practical standardized road test, as well as an examination to find out how well the applicant knows the rules and regulations.

Examination of Repeaters.

The Committee is of the opinion that the great majority of operators are safe and competent drivers and that most accidents are due to a small proportion of all motorists. It therefore recommends that those who repeatedly become involved in accidents should be given special examination. "Such a study would go to the root of much of the evil we have been considering and would probably be the most rewarding of all the ways to obtain an understanding of the underlying causes of accidents. It should lead directly to the means of reducing accidents most effectively."

With reference to drivers of taxicabs, busses and trucks, professional chauffeurs and drivers of emergency vehicles such as ambulances, police wagons and fire patrols, the Committee insists that there is a special public responsibility for seeing that their qualifications are exceptionally high and urge a special investigation to determine what these qualifications should be.

Should professional drivers be required to pass special physical and psychological examinations, not only of sight and hearing and of proneness to sudden disability, but also of mental alertness, quickness and accuracy of muscular control and presence of mind when confronted with unexpected difficulty? "Public safety and the responsibility assumed by the State in granting licenses to them would make it desirable to have the fullest knowledge of the defects as well as the competence of all who seek to be professional drivers."

According to the report drinking as well as drunkenness leads to accidents. The universal condemnation of the intoxicated driver is fully warranted by the facts. It is less generally recognized that even small amounts of alcohol, quite insufficient to intoxicate, tend to decrease the higher forms of skill and perhaps also lessen the sense of responsibility. It is highly probable that alcohol has contributed to many accidents which have been ascribed to inattention, confusion, recklessness, loose steering gear, or some other cause."

Fatigue of drivers is suggested as a possible cause of accidents in view of the disproportionately large number of accidents occurring at the peak hour of traffic in the late afternoon as contrasted with the number at the peak hour in the morning.

Conflicting habits frequently cause accidents. The confusion may be due to conflict of the driver's old and new habits, or to different habits of different drivers. In either event these accidents can be reduced by the adoption of uniform laws, uniform regulations and signals and uniform mechanics of car control.

The Committee calls attention to some great gaps in available information regarding automobile accidents. "Many current assertions about certain classes of drivers, such as women or taxicab operators, are unwarranted and often misleading because no data are at hand as to the relative number of hazards faced by such groups. Data on hazards met by representative samplings of the driver population are needed in order to draw reliable conclusions from our present statistics of drivers involved in accidents."

The report pleads not only for general and uniform reporting of all accidents, but also for the establishing of a special center of investigation to cooperate with State and local bureaus in carrying forward intensive studies. The investigations needed would include a study of the best interpreting data about accidents; methods of collecting, classifying and analyzing studies and intensive reports made by trained investigators; surveys of hazards; studies of the effects of lack of uniformity in laws and regulations and of the effectiveness of all the various measures which are now being used to reduce accidents. Such a research center should also undertake the development of improved examinations for use with professional drivers, handicapped drivers, and particularly with drivers repeatedly involved in accidents.

In conclusion the report gives a striking illustration of the differences between communities in accident elimination. From statistics of the Census Bureau for 1923 the following cities listed in Group A had only one-seventh as many highway fatalities as the cities in Group B, although the total population of one group is about the same as that of the other:

Group A—Jersey City, N. J.; New Bedford, Mass.; Hamtramck, Mich.; Chicago, Ill.; Modford, Mass.; Quincy, Ill.; Cranston, R. I.; Marion, Ind.; East Providence, R. I.; Duquesne, Penn.; Cleveland Heights, Ohio; Bath, Me.; Harrison, N. J.

Group B—Louisville, Ky.; Erie, Penn.; Sacramento, Calif.; Atlantic City, N. J.; Pontiac, Mich.; Joliet, Ill.; Cumberland, Md.; Kingston, N. Y.; Monica, Calif.; Casper, Wyo.; Santa Sharon, Penn.; Pottsville, Penn.; Santa Ana, Calif.

The Committee feels that "differences in relative density of through traffic cannot wholly account for such startling differences in the accident rates. Certainly there must be some difference between the regulation of drivers and pedestrians, in public sentiment toward traffic accidents and traffic laws; in physical conditions; in playground facilities; or in traffic systems which make one group of these cities safe and the other dangerous. If the knowledge we now have and the further knowledge we can acquire is applied in the dangerous cities to bring safety to the level already attained in the communities on the Honor Roll a notable contribution will be made to human welfare."

"Investment in a study of primary causes and contributory circumstances that produce accidents, and a comparative evaluation of the ways used in the various states and cities to encourage safe driving to develop competence, courtesy and consideration in all users of the highways, to eliminate recklessness, to discover and remove unnecessary hazards and to put the enormous weight of public opinion behind this movement for the conservation of human life will yield to

New York—For weeks the night clubs and theatrical gossips have babbled over a choice tid-bit. Mary Lewis, one of the Follies, climbed her way to grand opera. After her premiere, a former Metropolitan artist who now operates a night club staged a party and invited several celebrities. Anna Fitzu, the famous diva, was invited but did not attend. Immediately it spread over Broadway that Fitzu had deliberately snubbed the newcomer—"a mere chorus girl, you know."

Now, as a matter of fact, Mile. Fitzu was herself a chorus girl not so many years ago. She started as a chorine in "The Wizard of Oz" and did not reach the Metropolitan until she had studied and sung in Spain, Italy and South America. And she did not attend because her sister was quite ill.

But Broadway is a series of small towns, and the gossip is just as biting and bit-or-miss as at the Kanktown Kaffee Klatch Klub.

A great deal of this gossip has surrounded Florence Mills, the little colored dancer and singer who has won both distinguished success and fortune. She has been pictured snubbing the people of her race and of purchasing a "white" apartment house that would not accept her because of her color, and then moving into it. All sorts of tales may be heard. As a matter of fact, Miss Mills lives in Harlem in a luxurious apartment which she owns and travels to the cabaret in subways.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

quite as often as in taxis. And most of Harlem knows her as "Florence."

And no end of gossip may be heard concerning the official threat to padlock the famous Brevort Hotel.

Probably no place in America has been the gathering place of more artists and writers than this. It has been said that the novels written within its historic walls would fill the library shelves of three ordinary public libraries.

It was here that Edward VII held forth when he was Prince of Wales and the doings of the present Prince of Wales in America were mild and inconsequential in comparison to the parties of his papa, if one may credit the stories.

President Garfield would live nowhere else when in New York and there is a list of celebrated guests a block long.

And now, so the story goes, a mere coy young blonde, retained by the prohibition office—in the pleasant business of drinking cocktails, may wipe out nearly a century of tradition.

McTIGUE SUFFERS FIRST K. O. IN HIS LIFE LAST NIGHT

Jack Delaney Put Him Technically Out in Fourth Round

New York, Mar. 14.—(AP)—Almost three years to a day after gaining the world's light heavyweight boxing championship, Mike McTigue, one of the greatest defensive fighters in the ring today, has suffered his first knockout.

"His conqueror is one famous for knockout ability, Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., who has flattened two of the present world champions yet fails to hold a title. The chance for a crown will come to Delaney again on July 10 with the present light heavyweight title holder, Paul Berlenbach.

McTigue did not take the count, but he was so battered in the fourth round that the referee stopped the carnage. It was a technical knockout. McTigue had gone to the floor and regained his feet only with the greatest effort.

A right to the head sent McTigue down for the count of eight. Then he went down for the count of nine. He was helpless on the ropes and the referee was stopping the fight when the song sounded.

SPORT EVENTS FEATURES BIG SESQUI EXPO.

Great Schedule Ar- ranged for Exposition at Philadelphia

A schedule of sports events for the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition has been arranged for more than two-thirds of the six months duration of the Exposition which opens in Philadelphia June 1.

This roster which includes the names of some of the most famous athletes in the sports world has been arranged in such a diversified manner that the program is considered as the greatest in the athletic annals of any American city.

Two things are expected by the sports committee to draw monster crowds to the events; the influx of visitors to the Exposition from all over the country, and the fact that sports and games suited to every preference will be held. For the great audiences the committee is inviting the cooperation of the flower of American, as well as foreign talent, and is finding enthusiastic response. Because of the importance of some of the events, many of them official championships, the finest athletes in every branch of sport are unhesitatingly taking advantage of the opportunity offered to add to their laurels and make new record under official sanction.

Games and tournaments such as archery, trap-shooting, squash, indoor tennis, that the average sportsman seldom gets a chance to see, and others which are usually held before small audiences will be numerous at the Exposition and will offer spectators for the first time an opportunity to learn their attractions.

All out-door contests, most of which will be held in the new Stadium, will be represented not by one or two contestants but by many teams and individuals drawn from all over the country. The Sesqui-Centennial sports committee, directed by Dr. George W. Orton, is planning a series of events which will rival an Olympic meet and turn the eyes of the entire sporting world upon Philadelphia during the summer.

Game and Fish News

by C. F. Mansfield Jr. Secy.
The Federated Sportsmen of Illinois

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 16.—Illinois for the second time ranks first among all the states in the number of Bob White quail imported for distribution according to William J. Stratton, Director of Conservation.

Ten thousand Bob White quail, the same number that was imported last year, have been purchased from "Snake" King of Brownsville, Texas for delivery within the next thirty days. These are all strong adult birds trapped in the wild highlands of northern Mexico where they are subjected to a climate more nearly approaching Illinois weather conditions than in any other section of this continent where quail in such large quantities are obtainable.

Mr. Stratton, who has had charge of the old Division of Game and Fish and the new Department of Conservation for the past five years, in discussing this second importation of quail explained that great care will be used to have the birds released where cover and feed will be available and where these imported birds will have an opportunity to mate with our native quail. This mating and mixing of the new strains with the badly injured birds found in many localities especially in carefully protected areas produces stronger, healthier and more prolific birds. This according to Mr. Stratton is one of the most important reasons for the importation of these Mexican Bob Whites.

Reports from sportsmen from many sections of the state and my own observations showed that where the Mexican quail were liberated last spring, not only were the individual birds larger and more vigorous, but the sex of the coveys was almost twice that of native quail that had not been hunted or disturbed the preceding winter. Aside from this great improvement there was no appreciable difference in the actions of the imported or native birds either in flying for the dogs or in the length of flight when flushed.

A few more years of this kind of constructive conservation so ably carried out by Mr. Stratton combined with the purchase and operation of game preserves and public shooting grounds should put Illinois first in both the supply of game and in providing sport for the ordinary everyday man as well as the millionaire—and all of the bills paid not by general taxes, but through license fees by those who benefit the most—the hunter and fisherman.

ing of Harry Rice featured in the Browns' 6-5 victory over Brooklyn in ten innings.

The Athletic regulars made a poor showing in the first game of their three day tour of Florida training camps when they lost 7-5 to the Buffalo Internationals at Palmetto.

The liniment is named after the famous trainer, Mike Martin, the man who for years was trainer of the New York "Yankees," Cincinnati "Reds," Columbia university, etc., and who now is trainer of Washington's 1924 25 American league champion baseball club.

MIKE MARTIN, Trainer Washington Ball Club.

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, university student, heart-broken because she has been deserted by Stephen Renfro, her fiance, wanders aimlessly about at night, anxious to escape life, to get away from herself. Finally she enters a parishly-furnished house in the slums of the town. But she is disgusted at what she sees. A man standing in the hallway eyes her with a narrowed, speculative stare. Molly feels as if she were in the Inferno.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

With a smothered cry Molly threw up her hands to shut it out, let her head sink. Nausea seized her—horror, disgust. Her very flesh winced and cringed. She had not supposed it would be like that. She had not thought how it would be. She turned stumbling and groping for the door. She wanted to destroy herself, but not like that—oh, not like that.

"I'm afraid it's locked," she started, looked back over her shoulder. For the first time, she noticed the man standing by the stairs. He was smiling pleasantly at her, but still with that narrowed, speculative gaze. He was sizing her up, appraising what she might be worth as a new sensation. His gaze became a part of the pitiless, white glare in the room. It was like an X-ray turned upon her, which she could neither escape nor fend against. She stared back at him dumbly. Terror crept up her limbs, numbing and paralyzing. She told herself she must keep her head, she must think; on no account must she stop looking at him.

Instead, she seized the door knob and shook it frenziedly. She struck her arms hung straight and lax at her sides. Her shoulders sagged inward.

at the panelings, beat them with her fists, threw her weight again and again upon them. He was right. It was locked. She tried to cry out, but her voice faded in her throat. She faced round at last with an inert, unfinished gesture of appeal to the man by the stairs. It used up the final atom of her strength. But he only went on smiling at her out of the eyes that had seen everything, experienced everything. If it were not for this creeping numbness, this dead mass of tons and mountains settling upon her, she might explain to him—she might make him understand. She wanted to destroy herself, but not like that—O God, not like that!

The man, watching, saw her go down.

CHAPTER XIV

The express from the North, Mexico-bound, pulls into the capital at four o'clock, which is just before dawn in summer. It dawdles about an unconscionable time in the railroad yards, finally gets itself reversed and backs into the station, ready for the bridge over the river.

Gregory Cochran, who had been jumping from one extreme to another of the vast state in the interest of a certain political movement, was returning home after an appreciable absence. He permitted himself to be brushed down and handed the negro porter the usual fee. He covered a yawn, as he settled again in his section and gazed out through the half-screen at the grimy waste of tracks and the ugly, tumble-down buildings along the water front.

He was senior partner of the capital's best and oldest law firm, and he had an honorable term of service on the bench to his credit, though he had recently resigned in the latter capacity to go back into private practice.

As the express, which had been switching and fussing about now for a quarter of an hour, lurched to a full stop still at some distance from the station. Cochran bent suddenly nearer to the window. He pressed his face almost against the screen—always with the allowance of the track, so close, indeed, that but for the screen he could have put out his hand and touched her, a girl stood waiting for the train to pass.

She was plainly, but not unbekomingly, dressed. The drooping brim of a black straw hat concealed her face, but she was young by the slightness and suppleness of her body, which was lined with minute detail against the red and gold of the dawn. She stood in a sort of pitched-forward attitude, like a slim pinched blowing half over by the wind. Her arms hung straight and lax before her. Her shoulders sagged inward. Cochran took in every item of her appearance even to the limp interlacing of white fingers across the dark stuff of her skirt.

The train jared to a start, wheels began to grind. Soon the figure of the girl was swallowed up in the mists and half lights of the dawn. With another muttered ejaculation Cochran turned his glance from the window. The white, impassive face hung distinct and compelling before him; it neither receded nor grew dim. The eyes, staring, sightless, were like blank openings into a charnel house, where all that had once been held beautiful and dear lay strewn about in pitiful attitudes of death. She had looked at him, but she had not seen him.

"Here, Uncle Ike!" he pointed out his bags to the elderly negro who hustled up at this juncture, gleaming welcome from every black pore and every separate one of his wide apart, tombstone teeth—"You take these things on to the house. I'm going to walk."

The grinning black mouth stopped grinning—to yawn even more cavernously with astonishment and dismay. "Yo' gwine walk, Marse Greg?" he stuttered. "Whut fer yo' gwine do dat when Misa' Sary she done an' sent me fer to?"

"I'm going to walk," Cochran repeated quietly. "If my mother is awake, tell her I'll be on presently."

Molly had been for upward of four hours in the white house with the pillars—most of the time unconscious. She had a blurred impression that they had been very kind to her there. They had even wanted to send her home in a cab, but she insisted that she was quite able to walk. Their kindness had taken nothing from the horror of that first searing moment—from her nausea and revulsion at the way that man had looked at her. It was as if by that mere glance she had been branded for life—set aside as leprous and unclean. That she had escaped was a mere external incident. It meant nothing one way or another. The thought was what convicted one. She had deliberately willed this thing. She had taken the step. From that she could never escape. But at least the unfinished phrase had to do with her present destination.

She had considered the railroad bridge across the river, but it was so high. The vision of that blank drop through space lifted the heart out of her numbed body with the pang of final dissolution itself. Farther along there was a spot where one could climb down to a little buttress of rock which hung low over the water. Often she had noticed it from the train. To reach this it was necessary to cross the railroad tracks, keep to the sidewalk for a few blocks, then double back toward the river. A train was coming in, and she had to wait for it to pass.

A swift impulse, almost executed before she could check it, lifted the heart out of her again. But no—the train was moving too slowly—hacking in. She might only be mangled a little and go on living—with that cowed look of a trapped rat in her eyes like Mr. Kreuzer.

The shrill grating of wheels, the echoing concussion of cars jerked to a stop, caused her to lift her head. She found herself staring into the interior of a dimly lighted, palatial-looking Pullman. Molly had never been in a sleeping-car in her life.

After a time she became conscious of a face at the window, a pair of eyes, questioning and keenly blue, almost on a level with her own. She stared back dumbly a little, then let her head sink again on her breast. An instant later she scarcely remembered to have seen the face at all. Her brain was a camera without a negative.

When the train had passed she went on over the tracks—came out presently at the river bank. It was still dark despite the flare of color in the east, and she had passed no one, not even a policeman. She picked her footing carefully down the steep incline to the point which overhung the water.

The YELLOW STUB

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Cleveland, where the theater ticket stub is traced to THOMAS LOGGARTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to have Cleveland but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes, after seeing a blackjack from one of them.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church presses his advantage and gets Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they accidentally meet in the park.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

JIMMY had seized her by the hand. He was leaning toward her. His voice was agonized.

"Mary, you mean you—you love him?"

But she did not answer. She had turned her head away and was crying.

"Mary, look at me. Look at me and then tell me that you're marrying him because you love him."

"Don't!" Her voice was muffled. Her handkerchief pressed tightly to her lips.

And then again hot anger overwhelmed him. He was seized once more with that uncontrollable desire to hurt her.

"I might have known," he said bitterly. "That I had no right to hope. There was a fellow in your office. They called him Mac. He said money would buy anything. He was right; it will. This man—"

"Jim, don't. Please don't say any more."

But he went heedlessly on, the words rushing insanely from his lips.

"This man Church has money—lots of it. He can get anything he wants with it. He got you with it. You're marrying him for his money; that's what you're doing."

"How dare you!" She turned on him, her lips trembling.

"You don't deny it?" He laughed scornfully. "You don't dare tell me you love him. You can't. You don't dare look at me and tell me you don't love me."

She drew herself up. "You presume a great deal."

"I presume nothing. I'm stating facts."

She had regained her composure now. She said, trying to wound him, "To be so sure of yourself certainly indicates you are not lacking in conceit."

The barb went home. His face reddened. "Perhaps," he said, "I did take too much for granted. I'm sorry."

At the contriteness in his tone she reached involuntarily toward him with her hand, but he did not see it and she hastily drew it back.

And so he went plunging ahead, still trying his best to hurt this girl whom he loved better than anything in the world.

"I had thought Mac was wrong. I thought there were some things in this world that money could not buy. But I was wrong—I was a fool. You even got me out of the way down at the office. I offended you, and so you had me freed."

She looked at him, startled. "You thought that?" she repeated slowly. "You thought I had you fired?"

Instantly he saw he was wrong in accusing her.

"What else was I to think? I found you cold. You wouldn't even speak to me, and that evening the man you work for discharged me."

"I don't think," she said in a whisper, "that Sam Church would think such a thing of me."

"Oh, damn Sam Church!" he flared at her. "I suppose I'm to think he's some kind of a saint. If you want to know my opinion of Sam Church, I think he's a dirty sneak."

"It is hardly the chivalrous thing to do to speak like that of him when he isn't here."

"He lied about me!" Jimmy cried. "He poisoned you against me—the sneak."

"I suppose," she retorted, "you think your taste in choosing friends is better than mine. The lady you were seen with is not exactly unknown, you know."

"Yes," he answered hotly, "and I see her nearly every night. What do you think of that? I'm with her every night."

He rose from the bench and clamped his hat down viciously on his head. His back to her. She stretched her hand out in a little gesture of appeal, but he was not looking.

"Goodbye," he said. "You seem to have made your choice. I only hope you'll be as unhappy as I am." He walked away, without another backward glance, taking long, swift strides.

She sat perfectly still for several minutes, doing nothing but gaze after his departing figure as it strode through the park. Then she bowed her head on her arm and cried as if her heart would break.

"Jim," she sobbed, "you don't

He called up Olga Maynard and asked her to meet him downtown. He wanted to forget.

care. You don't care, or you wouldn't talk like that."

Jimmy's job that he had been hunting all morning was waiting for him in the first place he entered after leaving Mary. The irony of it all was that he no longer cared whether he got a job or not.

He plunged through the park with out a glance to left or right, his hands stuck in his overcoat pockets, jaw grimly set, head down.

"Money!" he exclaimed bitterly. "Mac was right. All you need is money and you can buy anything."

At the edge of the park he paused and looked backward. But the bench was hidden from sight by the trees. "God help me," he said, "I love her. I can't help it."

He walked blindly on and suddenly found himself standing in front of an electric laundry office. He stood irresolutely for a

RE-DISCOVERING ILLINOIS

By LESTER B. CROSBY

Illinois Chamber of Commerce

Running a rooster and four hens into a single-season hatch of one million chicks in five years is a dramatic achievement—for a grocery boy! There are times when mines close. When the mines close down it has been the habit of most of the inhabitants of Eldorado, Illinois—down in Saline county—to cloak themselves in gloom and to radiate melancholy.

When the mines close down. No chance, no hope, no opportunity, no salt shaker! Rotten town, and every body in it, when the mines close down. "Place used to be Eldorado!" That was way back when. Two families, the Elders, owned the burg, in the beginning, lock, stock and barrel. What to name it? There'd be honor enough for both only if both were in the honor. So Eldorado!

But the cuss who came to paint the sign on the end of the station couldn't spell, so he ruined it and wrote in boxcar letters the name as it is and as it shall be—Eldorado.

Used to be salt mines down in Saline county; some other workin' across the line in Gallatin county, 'round Equality. Time was when salt was quite an export. Oxen hauled it over the old Shawneetown-St. Louis trail, four miles an hour. Four miles an hour when the mud wasn't bad 'n' the oxen felt pear.

We zipped into Eldorado the other day over parts of the old trail. Concrete now. Sixty-five miles an hour the finger on the speedometer said. Roger Kelly has some Irish in his foot. And times change.

Running a rooster and four female chickens into one million chicks, as a season's hatch, rather intrigued me. I seek interesting things. Things that point to some moral. And I was led, head-on, to the Burnett bank, Burnett grocery, Burnett furniture store and Burnett this and Burnett that.

How long the Burnetts gathering this father and son? I asked. Seventy years? Lead me on, up the hill, to the grocery boy who rushed bundles in the Burnett grocery five years ago. I am after drama! I seek a hero! The boy who multiplies four hens and one polygamist rooster and gets a million chicks in the fifth year!

And there on the hill, setting up new hatching machines, we found him. Otis A. Carter, who uncovered his Eldorado, found his gold, his pay dirt in Eldorado—in day-old downy chicks—and doesn't care a thin dime if the mines do close down.

"They cost me seventy-five dollars, those hens and the rooster," Otis Carter told me. "And I didn't have the money. I had to borrow it. But I got eggs, good eggs, eggs from champion chickens. And good eggs are worth money. What to do with 'em?"

"Well, I decided to advertise. I believed in ink. I'd heard that ink can work miracles. It wasn't a gamble. I'd figured it all out. I chose the Prairie Farmer. As I recall it, the advertisement, that first one, was twenty-four words at twelve cents a word, $2.88."

Otis Carter has a sense of showmanship. He understands, instinctively, the value of drama in selling. In other words his ads and his selling literature have the punch. To be slangy, he knows his eggs. We'll let him talk some more.

"Replies to that 24-word liner poured in. But almost all of them wanted—not eggs but day-old chicks. Something to do, and right now. I'd need an incubator. How get it? Eggs but no money. And folk around town had a hunch I'd gone queer. Others thought real crazy. The cheapest incubator I could get that would do the work cost $375.

"Down to the bank I went. They gave me a rather doubting look. Made me feel that the rumor about my queerness had got in there. And that they suspected the truth of it. I'd go broke, the guardian of the strong box intimated. But I knew how could I? I was. So I said, 'If I can't pay the note I'll work it out—by the day.' That $375 came hard but I got it.

"Now? Well, the old credit's a bit better. I've got long toward $20,000 tied up in hatching machines. One hatch is 103,680 eggs. I'm shooting for 1,000,000—chicks this year. My $2.88 liner in the Prairie Farmer has grown into an annual advertising appropriation of $10,000 spread over thirty-eight farm papers and poultry journals. I'm running ten hatching machines, hatching eleven varieties of pure bred chickens. I ship to every state in the Union and I've had a lot more fun in these five years than I'd have had in picking up that little story. Real snap in it. It shows how industries start. Because Otis Carter's idea has gone over big two other young men in Eldorado have started hatcheries. It may make Eldorado famous as a chick producing center. Each, probably, will expand. Others may come. It means money to the community.

The chickeners pay ten cents a dozen over the market price for eggs, from selected flocks on nearby farms and will hatch more than 100,000 dozen this year. It's a little hard on the restaurant men in Eldorado, they complain, but it is putting better poultry into the district.

And here's something else that has'nt anything much to do with the mines—which close down now and then. It's the story of her highness, Lady Kornydke de Kol. Her highness gives nine and a half gallons of milk a day.

Walter B. Morris got the notion not so very long ago that dairying, if done right, might be a good thing. He invested $450 in Lady Kornydke de Kol. She is now the mother of two calves, property of Mrs. Morris. We'll let him tell about it.

"She's making nine and a half gallons of milk a day and I have to milk her three times. I'm going to start in milking her four times and I hope to get twelve gallons. Her ration?"

"She eats twenty-four pounds of grain every day, twelve pounds of hay, forty-five pounds of silage and five pounds of dried beet pulp which has been soaked in twenty pounds of water. I will increase her grain ration to thirty-two pounds soon. Her dry food, right now, weighs eighty-six pounds a day and she has all the water she can drink. (Ain't it fun to be a cow?) Cost of ration?"

"Oh, yes. I've got that figured out. Her feed costs me just $1.56 a day. Her milk brings me in $5.79 a day. Good cows pay."

"How much could you make on an ordinary scrub cow?" I asked Mr. Morris.

"It would take a real good scrub to lose me only twenty-five cents a day," he replied.

I ran across another little story in

ABE MARTIN

Intelligent people are allus on the 'poplar side' of anything. 'Nuthin' takes 'em 'cept out o' anybody as completely as tryin' t' drive a Ford after havin' allus driven a car.

Eldorado. It has to do with cotton's farthest north. W. T. Miller, builder and contractor, is the hero. We'll let him talk.

"Two years ago I thought I'd experiment a bit with cotton. I put out four and a half acres, long staple. It all ran about alike. From one measured acre I sold $204 worth of cotton and seed. The cotton in the bale from that acre ran $148.80. The land cost me $80 an acre. The best cotton around here can be raised on the up land land which people say isn't very good. We have no boll weevil here."

So we have three good reasons why a fellow doesn't have to sit around and wait for the mines to open when they shut down—Carter and his million chicks, Morris and his nine-and-a-half gallon Lady Kornydke de Kol, Miller and his cotton.

There are other things in Eldorado. The Lions Club has developed a 10-acre park on a hill just above the center of the town. The land was bought for $8,000 and $30,000 in improvements have been added. These include a swimming pool, skating rink, outdoor playground and a zoo. Adjacent is a free tourist camp.

Just out of town is a "Holiness" camp ground. Fifteen hundred to 2,000 persons gather from all over the south end of the state every summer, about Sept. 1, for an old fashioned camp meeting. Eldorado also has an artificial lake covering 140 acres, for a city water supply.

Viewing Eldorado it seems to be that out of a patient and unfeeling past a new urge is coming. The business men of the city met the other night, talked things over, an agreed to cast into a common pot one per cent of their gross income for a year.

BIRDS HAVE HARD FIGHTING DURING WINTER SEASON

Lack of Berry-Bearing Bushes and Shrubs Cuts Off Food

Spring planting will soon be here and while nature lovers are still pouring over flower catalogues and making their selections, there comes the cry of the birds that are trying so hard to brave the northern winters and remain in this climate during the long cold months, to remember them and to plant shrubs and berries growing vines, which will help in that important factor of food.

It makes a difference to every one, in the winter time, to see the beautiful cardinal and the other migratory birds that are forming the habit of late years, since they recognize man as a friend, of spending their winters in the north, and few realize that it is the question of food that deters many of the birds, from remaining with us, when the ground is covered with snow, rather than the severity of the winter. If they could be assured of a regular meal ticket, the birds that now go south could stay as they are able to find protection from the cold as the birds that do remain.

Bitter Sweet Attractive
What is more attractive than bitter-sweet, as a fence decoration? The Virginia creep, with its dark blue berries, a patch of hemp, a wall covered with the wild grape vines, all attract the birds and make it possible for them to secure sufficient food to subsist in the winter. Many of these vines may be planted near the home and then serve double purpose, as it makes it possible to study the lovely feathered creatures at close range, and at the same time give them what they must have to eat.

The Matrimony vine with its bright red berries makes an attractive tangle over fences or arbor and provides food for many birds. The seeds found in the fern leafed sumac are very popular with our winter birds and the robins or other birds, coming early in the spring, welcome the Japanese barberry as a life saver, as the berries remain on the branches during the entire winter months.
